NLRB slams Royal Motors and German Motors

Orders payment of $5-8 million in back wages and benefits

Royal Motors and German Motors have been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to pay out five to eight million dollars to workers they had illegally locked out in 1989. The exact dollar amount of back wages, health and welfare and pension contributions is yet to be determined.

Back in the late eighties, San Francisco Machinists took several hits, with several shops getting decertified or re-opening non-union. In 1989, three shops, Royal Motors, German Motors and San Francisco Honda locked out their unions including IAM Local 1414 and Teamsters and Painters Locals. The unions filed Unfair Labor Practice charges at the NLRB and then waited.

The first decision came down in 1993 and it was split: the union won at San Francisco Honda, but the employers were favored at German and Royal Motors. The union appealed in 1994.

"We were in the right"

"We knew we were in the right," says attorney David Rosenfeld. "We claimed that the lock-out would not relieve the employers of responsibility to pay union wages and benefits, and that the employers illegally instituted their own terms of wages, benefits and working conditions.

"Even though it may take a long time for justice, maybe in our lifetime employers who exploit their workers will have to pay the price."

"Over the past five years, we've sent several letters to these employers offering to settle, warning them that the tab would be large. We've been proven correct. . . again."

According to some estimates, the employers may have to pay upwards of $7 million - an average of $74,000 for about 100 people. This includes an estimated $50,000 in payments to the Health and Welfare funds for each employee, and pension contributions of about $24,000 per person. These, however, are estimates; the employers will have to pay actuaries to figure out the exact numbers. None of the original IAM members are still working at either location, but they would no doubt have the right to go back as part of the settlement agreement.

"The best part of the whole thing is that even though it may take a long time for justice, maybe in our lifetime employers who exploit their workers will have to pay the price," says Local 1414 Business Representative Chuck Netherby.

It's not quite over

Not surprisingly, German Motors and Royal Motors have appealed this NLRB order to the Circuit Court in Washington, D.C. That court should take about a year to make its ruling.

"When we win that decision, then the next appeal can only be to the Supreme Court, and it's unlikely they would hear the case," says attorney Rosenfeld. "Our door is open, if they want to try to settle. But when they come in, they'll have to kiss our a--." "These employers got what they deserved," says Netherby. "We've got many dealerships in San Francisco that negotiated good benefits for their employees all these years. They've been profitable, and now, they don't have to worry about closing their doors because of greed."

ready to capitalize if labor fails to move forward. The stakes are higher in the coming election because of our past success.

In gearing up for the 2000 primary and general elections, the California Labor Federation has analyzed districts and prepared an aggressive, member-based campaign that will win elections and build power for working people in California.

The Labor Federation's 10-5-1 Program for California Labor 2000 calls for the commitment and mobilization of all labor resources in the state to meet these numerical goals: • Increase union voter registration by 10%

• Increase union voter turnout by 5% • Mobilize 1% of union members in

Tribute to a labor giant

The labor movement lost a hero on Tuesday, October 25, with the death of attorney Victor Van Bourg.

"He was one of the best-known and most effective labor attorneys in the U.S. and a champion of the working class," says Mike Day, Directing Business Representative of District Lodge 190.

Van Bourg was known to be a brilliant strategist and tactician on behalf of working men and women. His client list included international

If you want a job done right, do it yourself. That's the spirit behind 2000 in 2000, the AFL-CIO's ambitious drive to place 2,000 union members on the ballot in 2000.

Campaigning for local planning commission, school board, State Senate or Assembly, provides union members with an opportunity to spread the word about issues that affect working families. Winning office means an opportunity to provide leadership that understands workers' issues and respects union organizing.

In California, 78 union members have already won office.

Organizing Round-up

Chico mechanics join 2182

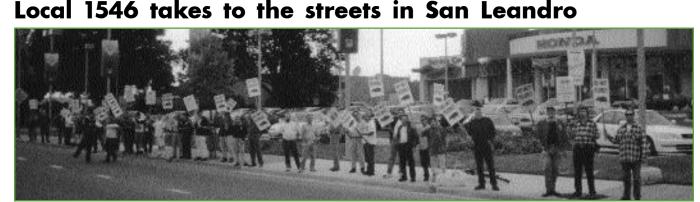

On November 5th, 7 mechanics at ATC-Vancom in Chico voted to join Local 2182. These new members maintain the busses and paratransit vans for Butte County.

"This is a big national company and they brought in some big guns from St. Louis," explained organizer Joe Coy. "But mostly all they did was put out a shopping cart full of groceries, and tell workers that this was worth what they'd be paying in union dues. These guys were really abused by the employer, so they weren't going to be fooled," Coy said.

"After the election, the company said it would give the groceries to the homeless. Several workers

John Bohatch and Jerry Peck from ATC-Vancom show off the company's "firstever charitable donation."

Pickets have araced the sidewalk in front of San Leandro Honda for more than two months. It may be hurting business, but this company seems determined not to hire Local 1546 members.

snickered that this was the first time the company did anything good for the community."

A different type of car, but not a different type of employer

District Lodge 190 has finally cracked the Saturn barrier by organizing the mechanics at Saturn of Marin.

"They used all the old tactics to try to foil our effort," said organizer Jesse Juarez, "such as including other dealerships, holding captive audience meetings, suddenly giving employees raises and more vacation benefits, sponsoring barbeques, and more."

With all that, the mechanics still voted six to one to join Local 1414. Negotiations are currently in process.

Money can't always buy an election

The mechanics at Woodard Chevrolet voted 14-1 to join Local 1173 even though their employer spend more than $30,000 to defeat the union. The key was focusing on economic issues, such as pension and health care.

Woodard tried to make the IAM out to be evil outsiders. Their highpriced attorney, Ned Fine, held a full-court NLRB hearing, but rather than intimidating the employees, his tactics only served to mobilize them. Negotiations are under way now.

Something about Gary

Twenty-eight workers at Gary Steel, a distribution facility and service center in Oakland, voted 17-0 for representation by Local 1584.

Some workers had waited more than five years for a wage increase. They wore buttons throughout the campaign, held weekly organizing meetings and faced away from their boss during a captive audience meeting.

Maersk gobbles up Sea-Land

Meetings between District Lodge 190 and the attorneys for Maersk have been in progress since September, when that company bought out Sea-Land's assets. The issue: keeping jobs and a good contract for IAM members coast-wide who have been working at Sea-Land. Watch the next issue of The Sparkplug for details of the settlement.

First contract at Anthony Buick-Pontiac-GMC

After eight months of often difficult negotiations, the six mechanics at Anthony GMC in Fairfield finally have a first contract. According to Local 1173's Vern Dutton, "the three-year contract calls for everyone getting a raise and the AI pension immediately." Then they'll get $2.05 in raises over the next two years, as well as more holidays and vacation pay. "The Health & Welfare is a company plan now, but we got them to match the AI benefits," Dutton added.

Greg Kucinski, foreman, was key in bringing the union to Anthony GMC.

"This is the first contract in the Fairfield/Vacaville area in 30 years," said Dutton. "It's not perfect, but it's definitely a big step."

Refusing to Bargain

The mechanics at Country Ford/Truck in Ceres voted for union representation last July, but unfortunately their will has been stymied. To date, the employer is refusing to bargain. The union is doing everything it can to get negotiations rolling.

Contracts settled

The 15 machinists at Sardee in Stockton just got a new contract with Local 1528, and Stockton Auto Glass also settled their contract with Local cheon Cruise on beautiful San Francisco Bay.

"The Stewards are the heart of the union," said Area Director Nick Antone. "You put yourselves out for the Union and its members — every day, every shift. This is the least the union can do to say thanks."

The highlight of the afternoon was the presentation of the Annual Terry L. Spitzer Shop Steward of the Year Award. This year's recipient is Bill Perreira, Shop Steward at Antioch Toyota in Antioch.

Brother Perreira was surprised by the award, but was certainly deserving of it. He's been a member of Local 1173 for over 20 years, and has served as a steward for several Perreira also received an IAM Convention 2000 Jacket recognizing his commitment to the union and hard work on behalf of the members at Antioch Toyota.

Nick Antone and Business Representative Vern Dutton then presented Certificates of Appreciation to each Shop Steward.

2182. These contracts have been ratified and all's well.

Loomis Fargo wants all the coins

Loomis Fargo, a coin and currency transfer operation, has been union for more than 40 years. Four mechanics in their San Jose and San Francisco facilities work to keep a large fleet of vintage trucks on the road. But when the current contract with the new Texas-based owners expired, the members took a hard look at their contract. They saw that their wages were significantly below industry standards and the proposed health care cap meant increased costs. They said "enough is enough" and took a strike sanction vote. Watch The Sparkplug to see if this coin company starts sharing the currency.

Lasher saga continues

Local 2182 has kept pickets at Lasher Volkswagen/Dodge/Audi/Acura/Isuzu in Sacramento every day since April. After being under contract for more than 35 years, the company suddenly called for an "open shop."

Mechanics at Lasher have continued to work but "there's been no bargaining and no movement," says Area Director Jim Beno. The union brought the company up on charges of Unfair Labor Practices. An NLRB trial is scheduled for January 10.

Hexane investigation continues

Help from mechanics still needed

The investigation into hexane exposures in the auto repair industry is continuing. (For more details,see the April-May issue of The Sparkplug.)

The Department of Health Services, together with the IAM, UC Berkeley and UC San Francisco, has conducted initial medical tests, urine sampling and air monitoring in preparation for a larger study.

The results from these tests have yet to be fully analyzed but the researchers are now looking for a site where both the union membership and management will participate in a larger study.

Researchers need a site

"By participating in the project, IAM members and management have an opportunity to learn more about exposures in the work place and to contribute to the health protection of mechanics across California," says Mike Wilson, a researcher with the Health Department and the UC Berkeley School of Public Health.

What you can do

The group is asking IAM members to do the following:

1) Look at the spray degreaser you use. If one of the ingredients includes hexane, call Mike Wilson at 510-622-4304.

2) Mike will want to know if the members at your shop would be willing to wear air sampling pumps for a shift and participate in a medical screening. He'll also want to know if management will cooperate in the project.

3) Mike and one of the physicians working on the project can come to your worksite or to the union hall to answer questions.

Call Mike Wilson at the State Health Department's Occupational Health Unit: 510-622-4304

if you currently use n-Hexane and would like to get involved with the project.

BENEFITS NEWS

Internal Revenue Code §415 and Retirement: As benefits increase, limits kick in Following is important information for all participants in the Automotive Industries Pension Plan and IARP plan. As retirement benefits have increased over the past several years, more members have started to approach financial limitations. This law regulates how much pension benefit you can receive. This information is provided by Segal and Co., pension consultants.

How does IRC §415 affect my retirement benefits?

Internal Revenue Code Section 415 (IRC §415) limits the benefits you can receive from the Automotive Industries (AI) Pension Plan and the amounts that can be contributed to the AI Individual Account Retirement Plan.

IRC §415 limits the dollar amount you can receive in a year from the Pension Plan to the lesser of:

• a fixed dollar limit set by the government ($130,000 for 1999 and $135,000 for 2000), adjusted for each year that you are younger or older than Social Security Retirement Age at retirement, OR

• a dollar amount equal to the average of your three highest consecutive years of compensation while a Participant in the Pension Plan.

These limitations apply to your total combined benefits from this Pension Plan and all single-employer defined benefit plans (before 2000, all single-employer defined benefit and defined contribution plans) that you participate in with the same employer.

IRC §415 also limits the amount of contributions that can be paid into the Individual Account Retirement Plan (IARP). Currently the total contributions paid annually into the IARPcannot exceed the lesser of $30,000 or 25% of your compensation.

What's the difference between the Fixed Dollar Limit and the Three-Year Average Compensation?

The Fixed Dollar Limit is subject to adjustment depending on your age at retirement and your Social Security Retirement Age. Your Social Security Retirement Age is 65 if you were born before 1938, 66 if you were born on or after January 1, 1938 and before January 1, 1955, and 67 if you were born on or after January 1, 1955. For Example, if you retire on a Service Pension in 1999 at age 52, your Fixed Dollar Limit would be $47,099.

The three-year average compensation limit is based on 100% of your average compensation for three consecutive years in which your pay was the highest. Both the Fixed Dollar Limit and the threeyear average compensation limit are subject to further adjustment for some payment forms.

When you retire, you will be asked to provide copies of your three highest consecutive years of compensation during your employment under the Pension Plan. Therefore, it is very important that you retain your W-2 earnings information.

What can be done to reduce or eliminate the impact of IRC §415 benefit limitations?

• Electing the joint and survivor annuity may help a married participant avoid exceeding the IRC §415 limitations since the amount of the monthly benefits under this form of payment are lower (because the payments are spread over two lifetimes instead of one and the IRC §415 limitations are not reduced for this payment form.

• Employer-by-Employer testing is an alternative form of testing, which is performed when the aggregate method of testing (all employers treated as one employer) limits the annual pension benefit amount under IRC §415. Under this method of testing and provided you have worked for more than one employer during your entire employment under the Pension Plan, your retirement benefits with each employer are tested separately.

• In part, to address the problems resulting from IRC §415, the Board of Trustees established the Automotive Industries Individual Account Retirement Plan (IARP), a multi-employer defined contribution plan which is not subject to combined testing with the Pension Plan, providing you with an additional yet separate benefit at retirement.

You may chose to have your entire IARP account transferred to the Pension Plan at retirement if the benefits resulting from this transfer do not exceed the IRC §415 benefit limitations.

The preceding is intended to provide a brief summary of IRC §415 and is not intended to address all relevant provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and Regulations.

Making it work in Martinez

Martinez Auto Body's owner Gary Hernandez is trying to find the balance between making a living and treating people fairly. "The key is getting people to work with you, and not for you. If everyone's on board, it's a better balance," Hernandez says.

This has been an independent union shop for 24 years, but the contract was based on the New Car Dealer contract. "As dealers got out of the body repair business because it wasn't profitable, my competition was other independents. But they weren't unionized, so my costs

District wins two IAM honors

Sparkplug named top district newspaper

In its first year as a district-wide newspaper, The Sparkplug won international honors for general excellence.

"The top performers we have chosen are-in our considered opinion-stellar examples of the creativity, passion, dedication and diligence that are all so essential for the continued health and progression of the American labor movement," said the judges' statement.

In giving The Sparkplug first place standing, the judges noted: "a very sharp appearance, headlines, typeface and artwork are woven together very nicely. Most impressive. Lots of members names, faces and opinions — an essential feature in getting the reader to turn pages and stay tuned."

District 751's Aero Mechanic and District 250's Northwest News took second and third place, respectively.

Spirit of Union Building

At a recent Western Territory staff meeting held in Albuquerque, District Lodge 190 was presented with the Spirit of Union Building Award from Vice President Lee Pearson. This award recognizes the District's "dedication and commitment to organizing and Convention 2000 fundraising activities." The IAM's international convention is slated to be held in September, 2000 in San Francisco.

"I'd like to see The Sparkplug updated-in a more appealing style—to attract a younger crowd. Also, it should include more personal stories."
